AROMA BLENDS

My Process: Time wise, it has taken as long as nine weeks to know when the perfect ratio, of just the right oils, has been reached. Blending is done one drop at a time and sitting intervals must be taken to allow the oils to 'marry'. A synergy develops between the individual oils and, when the process is complete, an entirely new oil emerges as the blend. Individual therapeutic qualities are combined, as well as scent, and the result is a unique, one of a kind oil. The last step is deciding what to name it.

My Ingredients: I use only 100% pure essential oils, of the highest quality and therapeutic value. Extraction methods are cold pressing or steam distillation. A prerequisite, of each batch I source, is that the GC Analysis certifies the oil as being free from solvents, dilutions and contaminants of any kind.

Jojoba Golden Oil

Jojoba golden is a pure liquid wax that closely resembles our skin oil. Offering a slight gold color and a pleasant soft scent. Creating a beautiful barrier from the elements but a lovely satin finish. High levels of vitamin E gives it antioxidant properties & excellent for skincare. Perfect for hair, skin & body.

AMAZING PLAII

Woodland Botanicals' Amazing Plai has been touted 'a miracle oil' and 'a blessing' by chronic pain and arthritis sufferers. The nature of Plai is to dissipate inflammation.

Human Health and Nutrition

ALPHA-STIM

Do you need a better way to relieve pain, control anxiety, fight depression, or treat insomnia? Maybe you've tried prescription medications, but they haven't worked as planned. Perhaps you haven't tried pills or shots yet because you have well-founded concerns about side effects, interactions, and even addiction. Maybe you've tried natural remedies recommended by a friend or family member or holistic treatments you've seen on popular blogs – but those are not regulated by the FDA, not backed by research, they're inconsistent and tend to be ineffective at controlling anxiety or panic attacks, chronic insomnia, depression symptoms, or pain signals.

CanVita

In today's day and age, the world is full of diversity so why isn't the same diversity seen with vitamins in Canada? That was the question CEO of Canvita Canada, Hamid Abdelrhman pondered when looking for halal vitamins for his family. As there were no companies in Canada creating halal vitamins, he decided to use his pharmaceutical background to come up with the solution himself. This is where the story of Canvita Canada began. Our dream came true once we met the approval criteria of Health Canada. Certification was granted and we were ready to bring better health to Canadians.

Avenanthramides

Ceapro's flagship product, avenanthramides, is a group of phenolic alkaloids sourced from oats and produced using a patented process. These natural compounds contain more than 20 different forms of avenanthramides, working together synergistically to provide the desired anti-inflammatory and antioxidant benefits in humans and animals. Avenanthramides provide relief from a host of skin conditions, such as eczema, allergic rash, chicken pox and insect bites.

Oat Beta Glucan

Ceapro's value driver product, oat beta glucan, is known as the anti-aging active ingredient included in well-known brands. We have shown the unusual ability of Ceapro's oat-based beta glucan to deeply penetrate the skin into the epidermis and dermis despite its large molecular weight. As a result, the use of oat beta glucan as a potential delivery system has attracted interest from multiple parties looking to improve the delivery of their therapeutic products.

Tincture

We have had wonderful responses from everyone that has tried our tincture. The first response seems to be a wide eyed expression. The unique taste followed by the noticeable tingling surprises everyone, especially those familiar with Echinacea tinctures. When the time comes to intercept the onset of a cold the results are what you would expect from a fine quality tincture ... it works as it is designed to! The key to effectiveness is to catch it in time. The minute you get those familiar feelings that we all recognize, a bit of a sore throat, the tickle in the nose combined with an unexpected sneeze or two is the time to follow the directions on the bottle and nip it in the bud.

Rhodiola Echinacea

Local to Siberia and the mountainous areas of China, Rhodiola Rosea* has traditionally been used in Natural Healing for stress and anxiety while increasing mental and physical focus. It has been used for centuries to cope with the cold Siberian climate and stressful lifestyle by effectively prevented stress-induced changes in appetite, physical activity, weight loss and the estrus cycle.

Food Waste Nutrient Technology

Food waste represents a significant contribution to man made climate change. Our technology can not only reduce food waste streams but create a bio-active formulation that is highly effective as a soil nutrient providing a sustainable phosphate / Sulphur formulation like no other on the market.

Cellulose Micronutrient Technology

By utilizing cellulose waste streams from agriculture we are able to provide a low carbon option for micronutrient applications. The technology provides a sustainable solution that is bio-available to the plant throughout the growing season. Not only is the technology safe to plants and the environment, but remains in the soil available to plants at a pH of 4 to 10.

Sustainable Agriculture Technology

Our focus is to provide sustainable nutrient technologies for farmers and agricultural operations that works with the soil. By working with the soil's microbiome and to addressing the soil's needs we can achieve better results while reducing our impact on the environment

Symbiotic EnviroTek

Driven by an unrelenting desire to harness the extraordinary capacity of microalgae to solve many global challenges, Symbiotic EnviroTek Inc., was founded in 2008 with the goal to create an algae growth system that is energy efficient, commercially scalable and able to operate independently in all weather extremes. Symbiotic formed collaborations across Canada with academic and relevant research institutions, with focus primarily on the technology development. The results of these collaborations culminated in a number of successful developmental milestones, and from their combined efforts, the MAC-B™ system, short for Modular Algae Cultivation Biofield™ was born.

Modular Algae Cultivation Biofield™ - Mac-B™ System

The system utilizes wastewater, waste heat, CO2 and other waste streams emitted from present day industrial and agricultural processes as inputs, towards the goal of achieving a net neutral carbon demand. It's a system of easily deployable photobioreactor modules, that utilize both solar and artificial light, a one-of-a-kind media agitation system and a gas mixing and delivery system for delivering specially formulated nutrients, developed specifically for the Mac-B™ system to most effectively accelerate algal growth.

The Mac-B™ system overcomes the limitations of first generation photobioreactor technologies, unlocking the ability to co-locate algae cultivation activities, in extremely hot, moderate or cold climates, in close proximity to waste emitters regardless of their geographic local. The system effectively enables utilization and "monetization" of non-productive waste in the process of growing algal biomass. It takes advantage of the incredible ability of microalgae to quickly metabolize non-productive waste streams, transforming them into renewable biomass that in-turn is used in the production of multiple output products.

coRISE is a social enterprise and a dedicated food upcycling organization in Alberta. We believe in community collaborations = we all rise together (hence the name!). We can't make impact alone, our sustainability partners such as breweries and food access programs are key supporters in our food waste reduction efforts.

In Alberta alone, approximately 1,000 kegs (73,000kg) of grain per day are wasted from the alcohol production process that's destined to be thrown out. These "spent grain" are by-products of alcohol production, used for their sugars and originally destined for landfill, compost or farm animal feed after the extraction process.

We rescue & upcycle these grains from local breweries and distilleries to reduce food waste & environmental impact. We transform them into prebiotic coRISE Supergrain+ - sustainable wheat & grain replacement for all products ranging in baked goods, cereal, snacks, pasta, dietary supplement & more.

BioProcessing Innovation Centre (BPIC)

Since 2017, BPIC has been operating with a Health Canada NNHP site licence with a 4,800 sq. ft wet processing area that accommodates extraction and purification of a wide range of biomass including oilseeds, cereal grains, speciality crops, botanicals and biomass secondary process streams. The Value-added Fractionation and Non-Prescription and Natural Health Products (NNHP) Program was developed to help companies working to develop natural ingredients as well as utilization into finished products. Process equipment is available for purifying and concentrating crude botanical extracts, including a pilot-scale spray dryer which can remove water at 20 to 60 litres per hour. BPIC also has an 800 sq ft packaging room for cosmetic/personal care products and NHP in a clean environment, which can provide a complete filling line for labelling, filling and product coding. The batching and filling equipment can handle many sizes of bottles, jars and tubes according to the specifications of the client.
