data → decision

Alberta is a global leader in real world evidence generation.

about us

We conduct timely, health-focused research using real-world data, engaging funding partners, decision-makers, and knowledge users. Upholding rigorous academic standards, we ensure the integrity of results.

alberta real-world data

The province of Alberta stands out as a global leader in real-world evidence generation, boasting one of Canada's largest, most mature, and comprehensive health system data repositories.

work with us

We are an expert cross-functional provincial research team from the universities of alberta and calgary, and the institute of health economics.

With a deep understanding of the evidence required to support health care and drug policy decision-making, we initiate the collaborative research process by considering funding partner interests. This enables us to identify the right research question and generate meaningful evidence that can be used for informed decision-making.
